

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I am founder and president of Puget Sound Network, Inc., a small ISP in Seattle, Washington providing the typical ISP services, to include dialup, DSL and web site hosting. We are also currently a Qwest DSL reseller.

Since we are a small ISP we have more personal contact and more so a personal commitment to our customers that you will NOT see when dealing with Qwest, AT&T, MSN or AOL. Our customers like to talk to someone local who is in the same time zone and will provide the answer to their problem without passing them off to other departments. Because we are small we work harder to provide the best service possible. We also provide employment for many people who pay taxes and are productive members of society. We also support many non profit organizations by way of dial up accounts and web site hosting free of charge. We are part of our community.

Since we do not own the copper we do not any means to compete with the Bells except the current regulations that allow us access to DSL networks. If that is removed and we are denied access we will go out of business. All the money and time that we have invested in our business will lost.

The worst thing that will happen is the consumer will not have a choice. No choice = no competition = monopolies rule!

Sincerely,

Michael Jaworski
